BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR through hands-on exercises

Participants:

The seminar was open to all students at JKKMMRF's AnnaiSampooraniAmmal College of Pharmacy, and a total of 350 students participated. The attendees represented a range of academic disciplines within the field of pharmacy, including pharmacology, pharmaceutical chemistry, and pharmacy practice. Most of the attendees had some prior experience with qualitative research, but some were new to the field.

Format:

The seminar was structured as a combination of lectures, group discussions, and hands-on exercises. The lectures were led by an experienced researcher with expertise in Understanding the Risk of Becoming an Entrepreneur and the hands-on exercises were led by a trained facilitator. The seminar was held over one day, with breaks in between to allow attendees to rest and ask questions.

Content:

The seminar covered a range of topics related to the use of UNDERSTAND THE RISK OF BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR. On the day, attendees learned about the different types of qualitative data, including interview transcripts, focus group transcripts, and observational field notes. They also learned about the different approaches to analyzing qualitative data, including coding, memoing, and categorizing. Attendees learned how to use UNDERSTAND THE RISK OF BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR to organize and analyze their qualitative data, including importing data, coding text, and creating visualizations.

Evaluation:

At the end of the seminar, attendees were asked to complete a short evaluation form to provide feedback on the seminar. Overall, the evaluations were very positive, with most attendees rating the seminar as "excellent" or "good." Attendees commented that the lectures were clear and well-organized, and that the hands-on exercises were helpful in providing a practical understanding of UNDERSTAND THE RISK OF BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR.

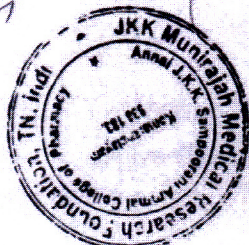

Conclusion:

Overall, the seminar on UNDERSTAND THE RISK OF BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR was a success. A total of 350 students participated, and all attendees received a certificate of completion. The positive feedback from attendees suggests that the seminar met its objectives and was well-received by the participants. The skills and knowledge gained from the seminar will be valuable to the students as they continue their studies and pursue careers in the field of pharmacy.

Recommendations:

Based on the evaluations and feedback from attendees, we recommend offering similar seminars in the future to continue to build capacity in use of understanding the risk of becoming an entrepreneur at JKKMMRF's AnnaiSampooraniAmmal College of Pharmacy. It may also be helpful to consider offering more advanced seminars for those who have already completed the basic workshop and are looking to further develop their skills.

ABOUT THE TOPIC

UNDERSTANDING THE RISKS TO BECOME AN ENTREPRENEUR

- FINANCIAL RISK
- STRATEGIC RISK
- TECHNOLOGY RISK
- MARKET RISK
- COMPETITIVE RISK
- REPUTATIONAL RISK
- ENVIRONMENTAL, POLITICAL, AND ECONOMIC RISK

FINANCIAL RISK:

- An entrepreneur will need funds to launch a business either in the form of loans from investors, their own savings, or funds from family. The founder will have to put their own "skin in the game."

STRATEGIC RISK:

- An impressive business plan will appeal to investors. However, we live in a dynamic and fast-paced world where strategies can become outdated quickly.

TECHNOLOGY RISK:

- New technologies are constantly emerging, particularly in the era of the Fourth Industrial Revolution. Some of these changes are characterized as "paradigm shifts" or "disruptive" technologies.

ANNAI JKK SAMPOORANI AMMAL COLLEGE OF PHARMACY
ETHIRMEDU, KOMARAPALAYAM - 638-183,
NAMAKKAL DISTRICT, TAMILNADU.

MARKET RISK:

- Many factors can affect the market for a product or service. The ups and downs of the economy and new market trends pose a risk to new businesses, and a certain product might be popular one year but not the next.

COMPETITIVE RISK:

- An entrepreneur should always be aware of its competitors. If there are no competitors at all, this could indicate that there is no demand for a product. If there are a few larger competitors, the market might be saturated, or, the company might struggle to compete.

REPUTATIONAL RISK:

- A business's reputation is everything, and this can be particularly so when a new business is launched and customers have preconceived expectations. If a new company disappoints consumers in the initial stages, it may never gain traction.

ENVIRONMENTAL, POLITICAL, AND ECONOMIC RISK:

- Some things cannot be controlled by a good business plan or the right insurance. Earthquakes, tornadoes, hurricanes, wars, and recessions are all risks that companies and new entrepreneurs may face.
