COMPUTING SKILL PROGRAM - MOLECULAR DOCKING STUDIES

RESOURCE PERSONS:

Associate Professor,

JKKMMRF'S Annai JKK Sampoorani Ammal College of Pharmacy,

No. of students enrolled: 30

No. of students Present: 30

Objective:

Docking is a method which predicts the preferred orientation of one molecule to a second when a ligand and a target are bound to each other to form a stable complex.⁽¹⁾ Knowledge of the preferred orientation in turn may be used to predict the strength of association or binding affinity between two molecules using, for example, scoring functions. The problem of finding a good position and orientation for docking a small drug molecule (ligand) to a larger receptor molecule is highly relevant to medical chemistry. New drugs can be designed efficiently by using computer-aided docking simulations to find highly affine components that bind well to the targeted protein.

Learning outcomes:

- learnt to perform virtual screening on large libraries of compounds, rank the results, and propose structural hypotheses of how the ligands inhibit the target.
- Learnt to prepared protein in docking
- Gained knowledge on prominent role in the initial prediction of drug's binding properties to nucleic acid.
- Can able to make molecular docking themselves
- Students can able to discover new drugs using this docking studies.
