Introduction:

The Seminar on Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology was held on November 24 and 25 2017 at JKKMMRF's Annai Sampooraani Ammal College of Pharmacy. The Seminar was organized by the Department of Pharmacy, and a total of 350 students participated. The purpose of the Seminar was to provide attendees with an introduction to the basics of Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology software as a tool for analyzing and organizing qualitative data. At the end of the workshop, all attendees received a certificate of completion.

Objectives:

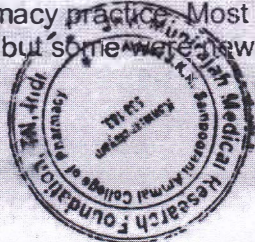

The main objectives of the Seminar were to:

- Introduce attendees to the principles and practices of Research Methodology
- The nature of your research aims, objectives and research questions.
- The Methodological approaches taken in the existing literature.
- Practicalities and constraints.

Participants:

The Seminar was open to all students at JKKMMRF's Annai Sampooraani Ammal College of Pharmacy, and a total of 350 students participated. The attendees represented a range of academic disciplines within the field of pharmacy, including pharmacology, pharmaceutical chemistry, and pharmacy practice. Most of the attendees had some prior experience with qualitative research, but some were new to the field.

Format:

The Seminar was structured as a combination of lectures, group discussions, and hands-on exercises. The lectures were led by an experienced researcher with expertise in Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology, and the hands-on exercises were led by a trained facilitator. The workshop was held over two full days, with breaks in between to allow attendees to rest and ask questions.

Content:

The seminar covered a range of topics related to Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology. On the first day, attendees learned about the different types of qualitative data, including interview transcripts, focus group transcripts, and observational field notes. They also learned about the different approaches to analyzing qualitative data, including coding, memoing, and categorizing. On the second day, attendees learned how to use Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology to organize and analyze their qualitative data, including importing data, coding text, and creating visualizations.

Evaluation:

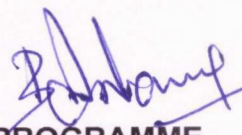

At the end of the Seminar, attendees were asked to complete a short evaluation form to provide feedback on the workshop. Overall, the evaluations were very positive, with most attendees rating the workshop as "excellent" or "good." Attendees commented that the lectures were clear and well-organized, and that the hands-on exercises were helpful in providing a practical understanding of Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology.

Conclusion:

Overall, the workshop on qualitative research with Tips to consider while selecting a Research Methodology was a success. A total of 350 students participated, and all attendees received a certificate of completion. The positive feedback from attendees suggests that the workshop met its objectives and was well-received by the participants. The skills and knowledge gained from the Seminar will be valuable to the students as they continue their studies and pursue careers in the field of pharmacy.

Recommendations:

Based on the evaluations and feedback from attendees, we recommend offering similar workshops in the future to continue to build capacity in qualitative research and the use of NVIVO at JKKMMRF's AnnaiSampoorani Ammal College of Pharmacy. It may also be helpful to consider offering more advanced Seminar for those who have already completed the basic Seminar and are looking to further develop their skills.

ABOUT THE TOPIC

TIPS TO CONSIDER WHILE SELECTING A RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

DEFINITION OF RESEARCH

“Research is an Organized and Systematic way of finding answers to Questions.”

- Systematic
- Organized
- Finding answers
- Questions

CHARACTERISTICS OF RESEARCH:

1. Solution Oriented
2. Logica
3. Objective
4. Impartiality
